Charles Anthony, a Cuban native who grew up in Chicago, served in the Army Reserve and held an executive position with Wells Fargo Financial. After returning from a tour in Iraq, Charles decided to transition to teaching as a next career. "So many kids are just aching for positive role models, especially men. Being in the service instills many of the same core values that align with what educators want to teach. It gives people like me a way to continue using what we've already learned, and teach those values to others." Charles continues that, "I've already served my country once, and since there is such a need for teachers, this is a way I can serve again. Charles currently teaches middle grades Social Studies at Hamilton Preparatory Academy in Chandler USD
